Dear Mike:

A few years ago I had my 15 year old house re-roofed and thought your people did a great job. All the debris was removed, plywood removed and replaced in a couple of places and everything looked great when done. I'd bid the job out and after weighing the proposals and trying to compare one company's recommendations and shingles against another's, decided to go with Colonial Roofing (even though it wasn't the lowest bid).

I had no idea just exactly how good a job your team did until Friday, the 13th of August, 2004. We were hunkered down with a few refugee relatives who bolted from SW Cape Coral when Charley changed course toward us and grew to a cat 4 hurricane.

We all grew closer to the grand architect of the universe that day as the garage door heaved and screens tore out of the pool cage. Shingles, pieces of soffit, tree branches and other debris flew by. I'd never seen water in a swimming pool rise and fall six inches before my eyes from rapidly changing atmospheric pressure and wind speed. I think they said we had winds of 90-100 with gusts to 115 or 120mph. (Whatever, we don't need to experience it again anytime soon, right?)

When the winds subsided enough to venture outside, my first attention was to the roof. Not one single shingle was even flipped up let alone being torn off. My yard looked like some pop artist might be trying to make a statement on roofing shingles or something. But all those shingles came from other homes in the neighborhood. Most sustained only moderate damage, but I have to tell you how grateful I am at not being one of them.

While our thoughts and prayers go out to our neighbors up the road in Charlotte County, we are also grateful to the people of Colonial Roofing. Thank you!

Sincerely,

Al, Karen, Chris & Jennifer Dunning
